Faculty of Humanities-2014 E.C.

Brief Background of Faculty of Humanities

The Faculty of Humanities (FoH) was established in November 2008 following the split of the then Faculty of Education into different faculties and colleges. FoH possesses some of the oldest departments with very experienced and senior academic staff in the fields of humanities.

In a decade long journey, the faculty's academic and administrative staff have significantly increased in number. They have also enhanced their expertise to meet the demands of program expansion and the large number of students who join the faculty every year.

FoH is also engaged in research and community service undertakings in the areas of language, culture, literature and communications. Besides doing practical and community-oriented researches on prioritized themes in the respective departments, the Faculty's academic staff also offer consultancy services in the fields of humanities.

Vision of Faculty of Humanities :

FoH envisions to become one of the best centers of excellence in Africa in teaching and learning, research and community service in the fields of humanities.

Since its establishment, the faculty has contributed a lot to fulfill the university's missions and visions through different fields of language & literature, journalism & communication, and cultural studies.

Mission of Faculty of Humanities:

FoH is committed to cultivating humanistic thought and ideas through high quality teaching and learning, research, and communication.
